NOTED INSTRUCTORS
INVITED TO VISIT
OGDEN SCHOOLS

At the meeting of the city board of education last night, the school directors approved a program of University of Utah extension work for the Ogden school teachers, during the 1916-17 school term. The program was submitted by Professor LeRoy E. Cowles and the classes will be conducted as follows:

Western History—Professor Young. The class meets Tuesday at 4:15 p. m.
Browning—Professor Quilley, Thursday at 7 p. m.
Education—Professor Cowles. Friday at 4:30 p. m.
Psychology—Professor Snoddy. Wednesday at 4:15 p. m.
Art—Miss Carrie Knapp, Wednesday at 4 p. m.
Economics—Professor Beal, Wednesday at 4 p. m.

These classes will meet at the Central Junior High school.
French—Professor Barker. Class meets at Weber academy. Monday, at 4:15 p. m.

In submitting the report, Professor Cowles stated that the university was offering history of education and other subjects of an educational character by correspondence. He also said that the teachers' reading course, upon which the renewal of county certificates depends, has been thoroughly organized by the university extension department and advised the teachers that the correspondence course will give much better results than individual, unsupervised reading.
Further business concluded by the school board was the authorization of the science instructors at the high school to proffer railroad fare and expenses to some of the noted scientists who have offered to come to Ogden to lecture to the high school students and the public, without other charge. It is expected that one of these lecturers will be brought to the city each month.

Before adjournment, the board was advised by the County Clerk Harry Hales that the city school system would receive $173,574 from the 1916 taxes. The report was filed.

SARDINIA HAS NO FEARS OF WAR

Little Village Remains Intact
Throughout Terrible Struggle.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—When Europe, at peace once more, invites the American traveler to its shores, one of the few spots whose ruins will not suggest the sanguinary struggle which has brought sorrow and desolation to practically all that war-torn continent is little-known Sardinia, the subject of a communication from Helen Dunstan Wright to the National Geographic society. A part of the writer's descriptive article has been issued by the society as a geography bulletin, which says:

"Those who have taken the Mediterranean route have at least had a glimpse of Sardinia from their steamer a day out of Naples. The island is in sight for some hours, and, if the steamer passes sufficiently close, a bold, rocky coast can be seen on which Roman outlook towers remain similar to those scattered along the south shores of Spain. The tourist seldom includes a trip to Sardinia in his travels, as neither of his advisers, Thomas Cook nor Baedeker, recommends it to him. It, however, is one of the few foreign fields that have not been overrun and overflood by the tourist, and in many of the villages a traveler is still regarded as a guest and not as a prey to be pounced upon.

"Some day, when tourists are tired of taking the tours laid out for them by the guide-books, perhaps they will break away from the continent and set sail for Sardinia, especially if they are not traveling just to enjoy hotel comforts. One can rent a good automobile at Cagliari, and a week spent touring around the island would probably leave the pleasantest of recollections and an experience long to be remembered.

"Sardinia can be reached by an eight hours' night voyage from Civitavecchia, the port of Rome, to the north end of the island. The crossing is quite comfortable. The beauty of the sunrise over the sheer cliffs and the craggy isolated rocks of Golfo degli Aranci compensates for getting up in the morning.

"As soon as one lands, a refreshing fragrance in the air is noticed—a perfume characteristic of Sardinia—not due, certainly, to orange trees, as suggested by the name of the port, there being none in this district, but to the many wild herbs and shrubs all over the island.

"Except for the eucalyptus and pine planted near the stations, there is a noticeable lack of trees along the railway routes. Among the mountains, however, which occupy the eastern half of the island and occur to some extent along the western coast, there are important forests of oak, ilex, cork and wild olive. In the mountainous areas of the island are many fertile valleys.

"The town of Macomer is the center of a region where many fine horses are bred for the Italian army, as are also the small ponies used in Naples. Cagliari, at the southern end of the island, is the principal seaport of Sardinia, and is often visited for a few hours by tourists taking the weekly steamer from Geneva and Livorno to Tunis. The bay of Cagliari is most impressive. On the right and left as you enter are hills, with mountains in the distance, while rising up from the lowlands directly opposite the entrance is the city, on a rocky hill 400 feet high. The top of this hill is encircled by a massive wall, built by the Pisans in the 13th century. At two of the angles rise the towers of the lion and the elephant, but of the tower of the Eagle, which completed the triangle, only the base remains.

In the center of these fortifications is the old town. On the slopes of the hill outside the walls is built the modern city of 53,000 inhabitants, the largest in Sardinia. The entire population of the island is estimated at 736,000, a density of population of 55 per square mile; that is a much lower figure than in any other part of Italy.

"Among the objects historically interesting in Cagliari are the rock-cut tombs on the hillside below the Castello. These are probably of the same period as the nuraghi, the famous pre-historic truncated cones 30 feet in diameter at the base and built by the men of the Bronze age.

"The nuraghi were undoubtedly fortified habitations. They are usually situated in commanding positions at the entrance to tablelands, near the folds of rivers, or on almost inaccessible mountain peaks and within signaling distance of one another. Traces of at least 5000 of these remains have been found.

"The ancient tombs of the inhabitants of the nuraghi are usually found near them. These are called the 'tombs of the giants' and are 8-12 feet wide and from 30 to 40 feet long, with a roof of flat slabs or rocks and with the sides made of the slabs or of rough walling. The bodies were probably arranged in a sitting position. In front of the tombs are circles about 40 feet in diameter surrounded by stones; these were, no doubt, used for sacrifices and burial rites.

"To get an insight into the life of the inhabitants of this isolated island, one should visit its villages. It is in the entire eastern half, with its mountainous valleys and villages, where the real Sards now live. Here one will find them good looking and in good health, generous, hospitable, honorable and quite poor. Politeness is carried almost to an extreme. Often as one rides through the small villages of the Sardinians or the old men sitting at the doorsteps rise and wish you a 'buon viaggio', or if it happens to be noon, some may wish you a 'buon appetito'. Even the young boys are taught to take their hats off when strangers pass by; and if one is in an automobile and happens to stop to get out his kodak, a crowd of youngsters seems to spring up around the car, all anxious to be in the picture. To refuse a cup of coffee or a liqueur when visiting the house of an inhabitant of a village is an act of great discourtesy, and even the poorest have some beverage to offer.

"Generally speaking, the peasants seem to be somewhat downtrodden and do not realize their just rights. The music of the Sards is characteristic, not all quick and strident like that of the Sicilians or the southern Italians but monotonous and slow, resembling very much the music of northern Africa. The Sards' costumes are one of their greatest attractions. They are of rich, harmonious, though brilliant colors, each village having its own distinctive type."

OF HONOR AT A BANQUET

Hon. Fred J. Kiesel was host last night at a dinner given in the Weber club in honor of E. A. Sherman, formerly district forester of the Fourth district with headquarters in Washington, D. C., in the classification of forest reserve lands. About eighteen other guests were at the dinner, all close friends of the host and guest of honor. Each made a brief talk before the social affair was concluded. The guests included Mr. Sherman, Mr. Kiesel, District Forester L. F. Kneipp, W. H. Watts, Mayor A. R. Heywood, A. M. Smith, Felix T. Moore, D. C. Eccles, R. E. Gerry, Rev. W. W. Fleetwood, Homer E. Fenn, George McCormick and Samuel G. Dye.

Mr. Kiesel's remarks were in regard to the pleasant feeling existing between the people of Ogden and the men of the forestry department and of the friendship for Mr. Sherman still existent among the acquaintances he made while located here. He also spoke in appreciation of the addition of the forestry service people to the city's social circles.

The other talks were along a similar theme, all of the local men mentioning the benefits that had been derived by the city through the location of the district forest service offices here.

In reply, Mr. Sherman and his fellow government officials expressed appreciation for the kindly feeling and courtesy shown them by Mr. Kiesel and the people of Ogden in general.

Mr. Sherman departed for the east at noon today.

THE DA BARA
AT ORPHEUM

Manager Goss of the Orpheum promises his patrons the treat of the season in pictures tomorrow night, Monday and Tuesday with his new program. Of course the big feature is Theda Bara in her latest picture but another surprise is a new comedy called The Jungle, featuring Napoleon and Sallie, the human chimpanzees. This feature will be run on the same program immediately after Theda Bara.

William Fox claims "Her Double Life" to be Miss Bara's best production and it has broken all records in attendance wherever shown. How a girl rises from the slums of London to one of the highest places in English society, then falls suddenly, when the deception is discovered is the plot of the story. Miss Bara takes the part of Mary Doone, the telement child who makes her home in the Refuge, a parish house at which Elton Clifford (A. H. Van Buren) is pastor. When the call comes for war nurses, Mary answers.

At the front she meets Lloyd Stanley (Stuart Holmes), a war correspondent, whom she had known in London. She is saved from dishonor at Stanley's hands, by the bombardment of the hospital tent. After the attack, Mary finds the body of a young girl in the tent. It is Ethel Wardley (Madeleine Le Nard), a niece of Lady Clifford's, who is on her way to make her home with the aunt she has never seen.

Mary changes clothes with Ethel, takes the girl's papers and luggage, and goes to Lady Clifford's. She is received as the niece. The aunt (Lucia Moore) loves the girl, and Elliot, the son, soon falls in love with her himself.

Then Stanley returns to England. He brings with him Ethel Wardley, who has recovered from the wounds received on the battle line. They go together to the Cliffords, and are about to disclose the truth about Mary, when the poor girl confesses.

She sees then that further life with the Cliffords is impossible, although Lady Clifford loves her so much that she wants her to stay. But Mary returns to The Refuge, to work out her salvation among the little children.

NO PEACE IS IN SIGHT NOW

London, Sept. 30, 1:30 a. m.—All the morning newspapers devote a major part of their editorial space to a discussion of the speech of Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg in the reichstag, contrasting its mild tone with former utterances. The editorials all assert that, aside from the attacks on England, the chancellor said little that was new and perhaps disappointed those who expected him to make more extended peace overtures.

"It is perfectly clear," says the Daily News, "that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg's speech was dictated far more by the exigencies of the political situation in Germany than by anything that is happening outside. What the chancellor is concerned about throughout the speech is, primarily, to re-establish his own shaken authority and, secondarily, to raise the spirit of the nation to meet the storm breaking over it."

The Graphic says that the dominating note was the old story of hatred for Great Britain, and continues: "This is the only possible comfort for the disillusioned German people. For ourselves, we only have to note with interest the declaration that Germany is ready for peace. We are not."

WIRE WHEELS GAIN FAVOR OF PUBLIC

One of the most interesting developments of last year in connection with automobile building is the wire wheel. More than 50,000 cars, equipped with wire wheels, have started their career this season. It is predicted that 1917 will see fully 200,000 new cars equipped with wire wheels.
